THE SITUATION.

The recent change in the Congressional and Senatorial districts in this section of the state has increased the chances of those aspiring democrats who are always ready to forget their own personal comfort and serve the dear people. The way the matter stands at present is rather interesting to a disinterested looker on. Upon one side is Fred Kurtz fighting Meek and the Bellefonte ring with all the energy he can, knowing as he does, that there is a corrupt ring here with Meek at its head, determined to control if possible the action of the democratic convention, not in the interest of the party as a whole, but in the interest of a ring, and for the loaves and fishes that it will bring to these same corrupt wire-pulling politicians. Meek, on the other hand, is quietly watching the turn of affairs and trying to manipulate the wires.

Kurtz is avowedly for Orvis for Judge, Mackey for Congress, and Wallace of coffee-pot fame, for the Senate. Meek is without a candidate for Judge, while he is nursing Alexander for Congress, with the hope that this course may advance his own chances for the State Senate; Bill Alexander of Millheim for Assembly, and Jack Spangler for District Attorney.

Kurtz thinks he has the advantage of Meek, as he formed a strong combination in Mackey, Orvis and Wallace. No doubt these men and their friends will make a strenuous effort to control the delegates or conferees of Centre, Clearfield and Clinton counties. Meek will resort to every possible devise, either fair or unfair, to frustrate this scheme. We do not think it possible for him to succeed, but, if by any chance he should, we might see some lively times among our democratic adversaries with P. Gray Meek as acting stage manager. This would suit us very well, as we have every thing to gain and nothing to lose, but we hardly think it would be desirable just now in the democratic camp, and for this reason if for no other, everything will be done that can be done to count Meek out this time, and at the same time to effect a reconciliation. To accomplish this the make up of the county ticket will be left to Meek if necessary to the great discomfort of Kurtz. Orvis and Mackey can whip Kurtz in if necessary, while Wallace serves the coffee. Meek has an eye to this for his candidates are dropping into the feud one at a time. Bill Alexander is one of the men Meek seduced into voting for him against Orvis in 1871, by means of the Lytle-Chambers letters. It is known that the whiskey interests, which is the Meek element of the democratic party of Centre county, are favorable to this Alexander's nomination, which if successful, will be Meek's reward to Alexander for his treachery to Orvis. Such men as Gilliland, Hunter and Munson must stand from under, for this wily politician will allow no one to be nominated who cannot be used to further the interests of P. Gray Meek and the Democratic Watchman. What has John F. Potter done to bring down the wrath of this self-constituted, grand sachem of the Centre county democracy, that he should fall from official position and Jack L. Spangler placed in his stead? John, the dictum has gone forth from the Watchman office, and the handwriting is on the wall that your overthrow is certain. The next in order is the County Commissioner. The recent election of Adam Hoy, Esq., as attorney, and Maj. R. H. Forster clerk to commissioners, gave great offence to the Watchman, and a new deal will have to be made. We will endeavor to watch the movements of these tricksters, and keep our readers posted as to their doings.

THE BEECHER-TILTON SCANDAL.

We have refrained heretofore from saying anything about this very unhappy scandal, but it has broken out anew and the papers for a week or more have been taken up with the recital of this, one of the worst scandals that has disgraced this century. Three years have now elapsed since vague hints began to be thrown out effecting the moral character of Mr. Beecher. At intervals during these three years, Mr. Tilton has threatened to make the short comings of the great preacher public, but beyond dark hints he has heretofore failed to gratify the public curiosity. The newspapers have published column after column, but when sifted down it amounted to nothing towards clearing up the great mystery. Lately however, he has come out with more explicit charges which could not be ignored or overlooked, and the whole matter has therefore been placed in the hands of a competent committee with instructions to sift it to the bottom, and although this committee was suggested by Mr. Beecher himself, yet they are men in whom the people can place confidence. The promptness with which Mr. Beecher called for this investigation after the publication of Mr. Tilton's latest manifesto will commend itself to the unbiased judgment of all, and should afford some encouragement to his numerous friends.

It seems strange that there should be any person anywhere, who could rejoice in Mr. Beecher's downfall, but there are certainly those who seem to enjoy the embarrassing situation in which he is placed, and are ready to believe that he has always been a wolf in sheep's clothing. There are still others who express the hope that if Mr. Beecher has been guilty of misdemeanors, they will not be proved against him, and if proved that they will be smothered in such a manner as not to impair his usefulness hereafter. We believe that neither of these classes are moved by a catholic spirit. No American clergymen has occupied so high a position or been held in so high esteem, both among his own countrymen and in Europe, as Henry Ward Beecher, and his conviction of acts inconsistent with the ministerial office would be a national disgrace. It would also weaken our faith in human nature. On the other hand if, after a fair and impartial trial, he shall be found to have proved recreant to the high trusts which he voluntarily assumed and guilty of immoral acts, he should be brought to as strict an account as though he were a less prominent man and minister.

The charges which Mr. Tilton prefers against Henry Ward Beecher are definite and of the gravest character. After referring to his previous letter addressed to Dr. Bacon and to the apology of Mr. Beecher therein referred to, Mr. Tilton in an article of several columns, accuses Mr. Beecher of having had criminal connection with Mrs. Tilton on many occasions and covering a period of several years. Mr. Tilton says that for a long time he had no suspicions that there was anything wrong, having the most implicit confidence in Mr. Beecher's honor, as well as in the chastity of Mrs. Tilton.

In 1870, after a winter's absence, on his return home, Mr. Tilton says his wife made a full confession of her infidelity, giving as an excuse that she was completely overcome by Mr. Beecher's reasonings and arguments, who assured her that in yielding to his desires she was committing no wrong, and he made her believe it. Mr. Tilton says he then communicated to Mr. Beecher, through Mr. Moulton, the fact of his wife's confession, and through the same channel Beecher sent the apology which has been so often referred to in this scandal.

The story of Mr. Tilton in most respects looks plausible, and is supported by much circumstantial evidence. Mr. Beecher has plead not guilty to all the charges made against him, but it will be necessary for him to do more than simply deny. Mrs. Tilton has also filed her statement, but as it is simply a denial we may say that in fact but one side of the case has been heard. In our opinion much depends upon the testimony of Moulton, and if he shall corroborate the testimony of Tilton we are afraid it will be hard to convince the public that the charges are not true. Thousands will await the result of this investigation with almost breathless anxiety, and will rejoice to see the great preacher come out of this furnace as gold tried by fire. It does not seem as though all the good work which he has accomplished can go for nothing, and that an offence can be proved against him which will outweigh all the important services he has rendered to the cause of humanity and progress. We can but hope that it will prove that the offence is of a trivial character, which has been distorted and magnified by the diseased imagination of his prosecutors.

TERRIRLE FLOOD IN PITTSBURGH.

Over One Hundred and Fifty Lives Lost.

The cities of Pittsburgh and Allegheny were visited last Sunday evening by a terrible rain storm which in the end resulted in one of the worst floods that ever visited those cities. Nothing of the kind was ever known in their history. Houses were swept away so suddenly that the inmates had no time to effect their escape. The storm was not accompanied by high winds but the destruction of life and property resulted from the sudden and unexpected precipitation of immense volumes of water through the street almost instantaneous like the bursting of an immense reservoir The greatest damage was done at two places in Allegheny known as Butcher's run and Woods run, being some three miles apart. The first named place was densely populated with Germans and here the loss of life was greatest. Many heart-rending scenes occurred which passes the power of pen to describe. We make mention of only one. A man being absent from home, found on his return, that he was all there was left of a large family, his wife and nine children being drowned. The loss of life is stated by the Commercial to exceed one hundred and fifty. This news came just as we were going to press. Will give full details in next issue.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA, July 25, 1874.

BUCKALEW'S PATENT,

by which minorities are given representation, has been practically applied in this city, and it works like a charm for the party but is severe on the public. No better nominations were ever presented for public confirmation than the three nominees for Orphan's Court Judges made by the Republican party of this city. Equally as good selections were made by the Democrats for the same office. These nominations were made upon the American principle that majorities rule. In this contest whichever party carries the most votes will elect all three of their Judicial candidates. The nominations upon either side are truly a reflex of the popular will.

We also elect two Judges of the Common Pleas Court, and here Buckalew's Patent' interferes by limiting each man's vote to one of the two candidates to be chosen. As the simple nomination made by either party is equivalent to an election, the politicians took charge of the matter, and the Democratic candidate for Common Pleas owes his nomination as clearly to 'Bill M'Mullin' of the Fourth ward, who engineered the Conventions for him as does the nominee of the Republicans owe his election to Col. William B. Mann. Each candidate of the Common Pleas is as fairly a representative of the party, as the Orphan's Court candidates of the people.

Buckalew's patent for securing minority representation is the best devise ever presented to secure nominations that truly represent 'the party.' It will be next applied in the selection of the two candidates for the Supreme Court.

A number of prominent democratic statesmen met here a few days ago—not by any pre-arrangement however—and went into a thoughtful and deliberate discussion of the situation. They regard it as the most preposterous folly for any democrat to even have a thought of Grant in connection with a third term; they were unanimous in this that the Executive heel has been upon the democracy of the Southern States ever since Grant's election to the Presidency and that the newly-found love for Grant on the part of Southern democrats, when carefully analyzed comes only from those looking for Presidential favors.

The Presidential question was also pretty freely discussed and one thing was apparent from that conversation that Pennsylvania's choice for the Presidency—on the part of the democrats—lies between Senator Thurman of Ohio and Governor Hendricks of Indiana, with the odds favoring the Buckeye Statesman.

I may also observe that from the conversation of that Coterie of leading men that while they were all fixed in their determination to present none other than a straight out Democrat for the presidency they were entirely willing to concede the second place on the ticket to a Liberal, like Gov. Curtin of Pennsylvania, or Senator Booth of California.

The line of demarcation now being closely drawn between the whites and blacks of the South was incidentally alluded to. No reflections were cast upon those prominent in drawing that line.

But little was said relative to the U. S. Senator to be chosen by the Pennsylvania Legislature next winter. One gentleman thought that as Hon. John Scott was the quasi candidate of the Republicans it would be a measure of wisdom to select the democratic candidate in State Convention as in the case of Douglass in Illinois in 1858.

John Raughley who killed Tyler Starling in Columbia, South Carolina, in 1865, voluntarily gave himself up to the police authorities of the city a few days ago, confessing the crime and stating that he had no peace of mind day or night since, and that death was preferable to such a state of existence. A requisition by the Governor of South Carolina was made and the murderer was conveyed to Columbia to stand his trial. The crime was committed while under the influence of liquor.

The St. Michael's German Lutheran Church, has just been torn down; it was located in the business centre of the city, and the large lot surrounding it, which is very valuable, is to be sold for the benefit of all the German Lutheran Churches in this city. The church was erected in 1743 for the Rev. H. M. Muhlenberg, who came to this country the previous year as the first ordained minister of the Lutheran Church. Five pastors of the church were buried beneath the altar, and with impressive ceremonies, their bodies were removed to the rear of Zion church in Franklin Street.

Ex. Sheriff Leeds occupies the late Jim Fisk's cottage at Long Branch.

Our present Sheriff is doing twice the amount of business his predecessor Leeds did and I therefore infer that when he is an 'Ex.' nothing short of Grant's 'Cottage by the Sea' will answer him.

The Episcopal Churches in this diocese have, in consequence of the appeal of Bishop Stevens, collected $4,774 in aid of the sufferers by the floods in the Mississippi valley.

Mrs. Williams who was shot in the arm, breast and head by her husband, has been pronounced out of danger, and her husband has been taken into custody and put under $2500 bail.

An alligator 10 feet long and weighing 250 pounds was caught near Marion, South Carolina. It was sent to the Zoological Garden in this city.

An infernal machine was sent to a merchant named C. C. Herring, a few days ago; it contained 3 pounds of powder and matches so arranged that a forcible removal of the lid would have exploded the box. Herring's son-in-law has been arrested as the perpetrator of the crime.

Wah-Lee, the 'heathen chinee' has, as we predicted in our last, come to grief; the injunction has been continued until fall and Warwick's ice-cold soda will no longer be made hot by Wah's ironing apparatus in the cellar beneath it.

There is nothing definite in the child-abduction case as yet. A disreputable fellow has been arrested on suspicion of being an accessory. An anonymous correspondence of this character is kept up through the daily papers.

'C. B. R.—Money is ready; how shall I know your agent?'

'C. B. R.—Got box; when shall we meet. Address J. D. Brown, 725 Poplar Street.'

The initials 'C. B. R.' are those of the stolen child, Charlie Brewster Ross. Just how it is possible for these brigands to communicate with the boy's father through the newspapers and not be apprehended is a mystery I cannot solve. I begin to regard the whole business upon all sides with suspicion.

Some one has suggested that a general contribution on the part of citizens be made to secure the return of the stolen boy. The demand for $20,000 from a bankrupt for the return of his stolen child has a significance, that to my suspicious notions of such actions, is difficult of solution.

A reward of $20,000 having been offered by the Mayor for the apprehension of the child stealers. I regard their arrest as very probable within a week.

GENERAL ITEMS.

Our information is to the effect that among the contemplated measures of the Congress session next winter is the construction of a net work of Inter-State canals requiring an estimated expenditure of $100,000,000. Guaranteeing the principle and interest upon sufficient Northern Pacific—Jay Cooke's—railway bonds, and Texas Pacific bonds—Tom Scott's Road to complete them. The creation of a sort of Jayne—Sanborn commission to determine upon the disputed claims under the Geneva award of $15,000,000 Alabama claims, and a Cotton Claim Commission to refund the $60,000,000 revenue taxes paid on cotton, on the plea that its collection was unconstitutional.

Senator Thurman is now in Washington at work upon a speech—the key note of the Presidential Campaign—and which will be delivered in Ohio during September.

Senator Robertson of South Carolina is authority for President Grant saying: That the party of South Carolina must purify itself; that he would infinitely rather see the state governments in hands of the Democratic party than to see it continued in the hands of the corrupt crew who have brought things to the present pass; that if the present officials are elected the President will refuse to recognize the government by withholding the aid it will require in U. S. troops in the enforcement and collection of State taxes, in which case it is bound to fall through.

Senator Jones of Nevada, gave Miss Nellie Grant a wedding present of a check for $5,000 and now the President has just presented Jones with 50 rustic chains made at the soldiers' home in Augusta, Maine, with the Executive's compliments, dated at Long Branch. Jones is worth six millions in gold, is young, good looking and a bachelor. We know of a deserving young lady in search of just such a bachelor.

GRANT ON CIVIL SERVICE.

President Grant is growing much less taciturn than heretofore, but remains reticent concerning a third term. To a friend of the writer, now at Long Branch, the Executive, among other things, remarked that he found it exceedingly difficult to avoid giving offence—not with intention—to many factions of his party. When Boutwell resigned—said the President—I was literally forced by the civil service reformers to promote Mr. Richardson from first assistant to full Secretary. They demanded, that right there, in the selection of a cabinet officer, was the proper place to put into practical operation their pet theory of reform.

When Richardson retired there was not an organ of civil service reform that asked to have their system of civil service continued by the promotion of Assistant Secretary Sawyer to Richardson's vacant place. To those inside the pail of 'Civilization,' it was a settled opinion that a good subordinate must necessarily make a superior chief. Their theory was practically applied in the case of Richardson and the result is known to be detrimental to the American system of government.

The application of that system, remarked the head of the nation, has recently been made in the selection of General Bristow and the good results are already apparent, and yet the demagogues still adhere to their dogma that the true system of government is a strict adherence to the rules of Civil Service Reform.

The appointment of Gen. Bristow as Secretary of the Treasury has offended NewYorkers who drove out Richardson that a man of their selection might be put in, so that the Treasury Department—in effect—could be transferred from Washington to Wall Street. As the smoke rolled upwards from the Presidential cigar these words followed it: Thus far Bristow has proved too big a man for the croakers to tackle.

BEECHER—TILTON.

Sacred history informs us that Bathsheba the wife of Uriah the Hittite 'was very beautiful to look upon,' that David, an elderly gentleman with several wives, looked upon Mrs. Uriah and sinned. That Joseph, an unmarried youth, was sorely tempted by Mrs. Potiphor but sinned not, although Mrs. Potiphor says he did, and that 'he left his garment in her hand, and fled and got him out.'

In profane as in sacred history there are many Davids and but few Josephs. I believe, however, that Mr. Beecher will prove a Joseph in virtue and that Mrs. Tilton—more beautiful than the Hittite, or the Egyptian woman—never played the role of Mrs. Potiphor. I suspect the skeleton in the Tilton home is not the wife and mother of that household. I strongly suspect that the manly beauty of Theodore Tilton has played the very devil with his peace of mind, and has thrown many Mrs. Potiphors in his way to tempt him.

Theodore Tilton is majestically handsome; he is the walking impersonation of poetry, animation, intellect, daring, pathos, 'beautiful disdain,' grandeur and wit: all these, combined with a graceful phisique, that resembles the mighty oak or the majestic lion in its strength and symmetry, make him an Apollo Belvedere in female eyes.

This incident, in connection with 'the Tilton,' came under my own observation; During the Greeley-Grant contest Tilton came to Philadelphia to make a speech for Greeley. It was a scathing review of Grant's administration and was listened to by thousands: among whom was Miss Anna M. Dickinson, who occupied a proscenium box unnoticed by Tilton. After the close of the address Miss Dickinson was escorted to her carriage by an officer of the meeting; to him Miss Dickinson remarked she desired to see Mr. Tilton; in five minutes thereafter Tilton was at her side, or rather carriage. In three minutes more and Tilton was in her carriage whirling off at a three minutes gait to Anna's easy home.

The managers of the meeting were angry with the Dickinson for capturing their guest, while Theodore has yet to express his regrets for his abrupt departure. Whether Anna drove him to the depot to meet the midnight train for New York, or played the hostess until the following day, I do not know. I, with others, were angry because the eloquent fellow was enticed away and did not care if she entertained him a month instead of a few hours. J. W. F.

Poetry.

NOT ALONE.

MARGARET JUNKIN.

A little child, whose sweet and ringing laugh
Made music for the household, whose gay step
Kept time to the light measure of her heart,
Whose nature ever claimed a kindredship
With glad and joyous things, and only found
Pleasures in these when others shared them too,—
This loving fair, companionable child
Lay struggling wearily with mortal pain;
The sportive light had faded from her eye,
The laughter from her lip, the playful mein,
From her whole being, as the radiant path
Through which she danced her pleasant hours away,
Darkness beneath a suden giant shadow,
That stalked between her and life's golden sun.
She raised her young eyes wonderingly, and sought
To know whence came the gloom; and she was told
That the mysterious shadow's name was Death,
And he was come to call her to a land
Where no such startling presence ever more
Should mar her joy.

Imploringly she twined
Her arms about her father, as he knelt,
Tearful, beside her, and thus fondly plead:
"Father, go with me! then I will not fear
The dark, deep valley thou hast told me of,
Nor tremble, if thy hand is holding mine;
But not alone, O father, I entreat thee,
Let not thy little one depart alone!"
"Nay, daughter,"—and the father's tears fell fast
Upon the silken ringlets, as he kissed
Her palid forehead,—"Nay, my precious child!
Thou shalt not go alone: the Savior's hand,
A kinder, surer, tenderer hand than mine,
Wilt lift thee up and gently carry thee
Home to thy mother, darling, and thy God!
Thou art not fearful now?"

The eager eyes
Closed a brief moment, and intense thought
Burdened the brow, as, gathering up its strength
The spirit turned its anxious gaze within,
And there demanded answer. When within
The quivering lash was lifted, the dim clouds
Which doubt and fear had summoned all were gone;
And the familiar look came back,
Filling her soul with sunshine. From her lips,
Now tremulous with death, a murmur broke,
But half articulate, of glad consent
And joyous exultation, which, to him
Whose ear caught up its precious meaning, seemed
The first faint prelude to that heavenly song
Which the sweet angel-child should sing forever.

EBB-TIDE.

On a summer eve, when the sun was low,
An old man sat in the golden glow,
The waves were washing the sandy stones,
And calm and sweet were their languid tones;
He looked and listened, and softly sighed,
As he heard the voice of the ebbing tide.

He has passed his threescore years and ten,
He has smiled and wept like other men;
Brother and parent, friend and wife,
Have drifted over the water of life,
To the peaceful shore where the saints abide;
But he was left by the ebbing tide.

Left—all alone with the dreamy past;
A battered hull in the shingle cast,
No more to ride on the seething main,
Nor feel the shock of the storm again;
He lay at peace by the ocean side,
To wait the coming of Death's great tide.

The solemn tide, with its voiceless roll,
Shall bear on its waves the weary soul
To the blessed land, where the angel throng
Will hail its coming with holy song,
And the home of that faithful heart shall be
A place of rest by the Crystal Sea!

Our Story Teller.

THE WISHED-FOR SAW-MILL.

In one of my angling excursions, I went, by the advice of my knowing friend Nibbs, to try the small river Toft, which runs through a pretty bit of country, and has on its banks the village, or more properly hamlet of Whortly, where I took up my residence. The place had no inn, but that did not matter. The cottage which gave me shelter was clean and comforable; Mrs. Williams a motherly dame, had a good store of sweet linen, and made capital bread. There was a difficulty about butcher-meat; but sides of bacon were suspended all over the kitchen ceiling, eggs were reckoned by the dozen, chickens and ducks were cackling around, excellent vegetables grew in the garden; and for fish in my opinion, small river-trout are almost as nice to eat as to catch, which is saying a great deal.

I took a letter from Nibbs, and was installed in his accustomed quarters, for I found that he was in the habit of running down for a few days whenever business permitted him, and several books arranged on the shelf of the sitting room had his name in them. I feared at first I was turning the couple out of their parlor, but they assured me that they only used it on grand occasions, and lived habitually in the kitchen. My bedroom; from the lattice window, framed with jassamine and roses, I could see the little river as it ran babbling and sparkling by. There was only one drawback, which was the close proximity of the workshop, in which either my host or his workman was constantly sharpening a saw; but even this was not an unmixed evil, for it induced to that early rising which is so great a point in the anger's favor.

Nibbs had said "old" Peter Williams, and I expected something venerable, but the term proved to be familiar rather than descriptive, for Williams was not much older than Nibbs himself, and was born in 1820. Mrs Williams was perhaps a couple of years younger, I was puzzled at first to think where the work was to come from to keep a carpenter in such out-of-the-way spot, but that difficulty was soon solved. There were a good many houses hidden away amongst the woods within a circuit of two or three miles, and there was no competition. Gentlemen, residing about there were, indeed, I afterwards learned, rather addicted to amateur carpentering, a taste doubtless fosteded by the profusion of wood all around; but amateurs rarely interfere with professionals. Peter was probably saved many a fidgety and profitable job by the skill of his neighbors, but was rarely done out of a good one. It seldom occurs to a gentleman to supply his own household with coffins, for example.

Still the business was fluctuating; at some times more than Peter and his assistant could well get through, at others so slack that the man could make head against, leaving the matter free to indulge in the pursuit he loved; and with him fly fishing was a passion. When any sport, taste or affection fills the soul of a man to that extent, however, he is certain to find some way of gratifying it under any circumstances. Though my host had plenty to do at the period of my visit, he was evidently glad enough of the excuse for acting as my cicerone to throw aside the plan for the rod for an hour or so; and he generally managed to accompany me a little way up the stream either in the morning or the evening. And it was lucky for me he did so, for it was a difficult piece of water to fish, but he knew every inch of it. Without his aid, and using the ordinary flies, I should soon have quitted the neighborhood in disgust. As it was, I had capital sport.

And what was equally pleasant, when I came home, I had such a good welcome. It is a very great addition to the enjoyment of the amateur fisherman to display his spoils before a sympathetic gaze, and Peter Williams met me with the eagerness of a child expecting a new toy. I dared not have brought home an undersized fish; it would have hurt his feelings. He admired any trout larger than the average, as though he had never seen such a thing before; weighed it, measured it, and wanted to know exactly where and how it was captured. Mrs. Williams was equally frank and friendly; and when I found I should be welcome, I proposed to come and smoke my pipe with the couple in the kitchen of the evening. They soon grew chatty and communicative, and I learned that they had a sorrow.

It was on the third occasion of my passing the evening in their company that I asked whether Hackle always came alone, and if he never brought a friend with him.

'Never, sir,' replied Mrs. Williams, emphatically. 'I don't know where he could be put up.'

'Why,' said I, 'you have another bedroom back of mine; the door was open when I came down to dinner, and it looked very comfortably furnished! Could you not put a second visitor there?'

Mrs. Williams knitted more quickly at the sock she was making, and offered no reply; her husband puffed hard at his pipe. I saw that I had touched on a painful subject, but could not immediately turn to another, so there was an awkward pause.

'You see, sir,' said Peter at last, knocking out his ashes, 'the old woman would not have that room occupied on any account, because it was John's, and she is always expecting John to come back. I know better, but mothers never stop hoping.'

'I don't hope,' said his wife, taking off her spectacles and wiping her eyes. 'I am certain sure that my boy will come back to see me, if it is only for a few days, and then, when he finds everything just as he left it, may be he will stop longer.'

'Very likely,' said I. 'It would never do, I see, to have lodgers.'

'Children's all alike,' said Peter. 'You nurse them, and coddle, and plan for them, and all you get is ingratitude. They are just like birds; soon as they can fly alone, they are off. I don't say our John is worse than the rest, or so bad as many, for he has never disgraced us—only forgotten us.

'Don't say that, Peter,' sobbed his wife. 'I'll never believe it.'

'Well, I hope I am wrong; but I'm not. He has got hold of some pink-face girl, and does'nt care a farthing for any one else in the world. They are all like that at his age.'

'Does he never write?' I asked, feeling awkward, but wishing to show an interest.

'Yes, he writes now and then, not often. Why should he? He knows my wishes, and is determined to have his own way.'

'You are hard upon him, Peter,' said Mrs. Williams. 'Young people have their way to make in the world.'

'I know that, old woman; but he might have made it here.'

'You see, sir, he is uncommon clever at carving, and that sort of work fetches a high price just now; it's the fashion, where they are doing up old churches and the like; that's what tempted the lad away.'

'Perhaps,' said I, 'he felt that his talent was being wasted in a place where he had no particular object upon which to exercise it.'

'May be sir; but he knew that I had set my heart on the saw-mill all my life, and I could not work it if I got it now without his help; he understood well enough, too, that it would be a better business for himself than working for wages, however high they may be, and a nice retirement for me in my old age. But that is just it, I expect; he did not fancy having for partner an old father, who might soon be getting past his work, though there is no sign of that about me at present, thank Heaven!'

'Ah!' said I, 'you were thinking of setting up a saw-mill? It certainly ought to be a good place for one.'

'It ought, and it is, sir,' replied Peter Williams, growing excited. And then he entered into many lengthened particulars, of which this is the sum. The saw-mill was an existing institution, at present in the possession of a Mr. Tankard, better known as Drunken Tommy, who was willing to cede his lease, goodwill and fixtures for one hundred pounds and would probably take eighty. That sounds an absurd trifle to give for a saw-mill, but you must remember that the Toft is a very little stream, and its water power quite Lilliputian. Drunken Tommy did not make much of an income after he had paid his rent. But then he confined himself strictly to the sawing of trees into planks, and was indolent about that. An active, intelligent, well educated man, who combined the carpentering business, or rather made the saw-mill subservient to it, might expect a very different result. And I could see that this was the only part of Mr. Williams' belief as to the advantages to be derived from his pet project, and that he dreamed ambitious dreams of becoming a timber merchant. And to think that fortune, in a small way, was to be missing for want of a hundre pounds!'

Could he not have borrowed that sum! Ay, he could; but that was where he and his son John had their first disagreement. John would have nothing to say to borrowing; and without the young man's cleverness, activity, and clear head for business, the father could not see his way. And so they parted, not in anger, indeed, but in coolness, considering that John was an only child, and lived on terms of perfect affection with his parents up to that date. Nor could it be said that he left them capriciously, without good reason; for having sent a specimen of carving to a famous firm who were engaged in restoring a cathedral, he received an offer of employment, the terms of which might well dazzle a young country artificier. This happened three years before and they had not seen him since. At first his letters were very regular, but gradually they grew less so, and now they had not heard from him for nearly three months.

I did not learn all this at one interview, for the couple interrupted one another, and confused the account, in addition to which they persisted in assuming that I had a certain amount of previous knowledge, which I did not possess. However, when the ice was once broken, they often reverted to the subject of their self willed son, and by degrees I got a connected narrative.

I had originally intended to limit my stay at Whortle to a week; but the quiet homeliness of the place suited me so exactly that a fortnight slipped by almost before I was aware. I was not fishing all the time; there were two days of east wind, and three of unceasing rain, which, with a couple of Sundays, reduced my actual period of sport one half. Still I was not dull, for, as a rule no man is so happy in his own society as the angler. But I made the unfavorable weather which had intervened an excuse for allowing myself one week more, at the expiration of which I determined that I must leave lest I should be keeping Nibbs out of his favorite haunt.

On the last evening but one, I hooked the largest fish I had yet raised. As Nibbs had told me, the Toft was a difficult river to fish, in consequence of the bushes which fringed the river on each side. These concealed you, indeed, so that you could throw only a short line; and when you hooked a trout the method of securing him was to wind up until he was only about four feet from the top of the rod, and then left him out clear of the boughs. But on the present occasion I could not do this, the fish being of a weight which would have smashed either rod or line to a certainty; and Peter was not there to assist me. So I played with the trout, following him gently down the stream, and looking out for a clean spot to land him at. Fortunately, (I mean for me,) he was very firmly hooked.

'You have got a good one, sir,' said a voice—not Peter's—at my elbow.

'Ay,' I replied; 'if I only knew how to get him out of the water.'

'I think I can help you,' said he.

'I have no landing net.'

'Never mind; I can get down to the water's edge through that brush; play him up to me, and I will slip my cap under him.' This was effected; and in less than a minute the speckled beauty was leaping before us in the grass.

'There are not many of his size in this stream,' said my friend in need. 'I doubt whether my father ever took a heavier one out of it.'

I looked at him; he was a handsome young man, with a broad forehead, bright gray eyes, and rather massive jaw.

'Is your name Williams?' I asked rather abruptly.

'Yes,' said he looking up, surprised.

'I am lodging at your father's house,' I explained.

'All well?' he asked.

'Quite.'

'And I am anxious to see them; so I will say good day for the present, sir,' and he strode off with an elastic step.

I delayed my return beyond my usual dinner-time, and stole into the house somewhat sheepishly; a great joy is almost as sacred as a great sorrow. When Mrs. Williams brought me my food, I made a sort of half apology for taking her away from her son and hoped his visit would be a long one.

'Life long, I hope, sir,' she replied, fairly laughing with delight. 'He has has been getting three pounds a week a great part of the time, and he has saved enough money to buy the saw-mill. That was why he left us because he knew that his father would never be happy unless he had his fancy. But he would not tell us what he was up to at first, because he was not sure of succeeding, and feared disappointing us. And later, when it was all right, he could not deny himself the pleasure of a surprire.'

I have had a week on the Toft quite lately. Drunken Tommy has ceded the mill to Williams and Son, who have improved the business considerably already. I had several chats with both, and found that each retained his original opinion.

'John is a very good lad,' said Peter; 'first-rate; there is no better in England. But he cannot see that those three years have been so much time lost. We could have repaid the hundred pounds principal and interest at the end of the first year.'

'I'll never start on borrowed money while I can earn my crust, though the chance be ever so tempting,' said John. 'The interest eats up your profit, and that breaks your heart. And then if you go ill? We've got the saw-mill, and the comfort of knowing that we have never been in debt, or owed it to the favor of any one.'

HOW I CAME TO BE MARRIED.

BY COUNTRY COZ.

It may be funny, but I have done it. I've got rib and bady! Shadows departed—oyster stews, brandy cocktails, cigar boxes, boot-jacks, absconding shirt buttons, whist and dominoes. Shadows present—hoop skirts, band-boxes, ribbons, galters, long stockings, juvenile dresses, tin trumpets, little willow chairs, cradle, bib, pap, sugar teats, paragoric, hive syrup, rhubarb, senna, saits, castor oil, Godfrey's cordial, squills, doctor's bills. Shadows future—more nine-pound babies, more hive syrup, etc.

I'll just tell you how I got caught. I was the darndest, most tea custard, bashful fellow you ever did see; it was kinder in my line to be taken with the shakes every time I saw a pretty girl approaching me, and I would cross the street rather than face one. It was not because I didn't like the critters, for, if I was behind the fence peeping through a knot-hole, I could look at one long enough.

Well, my sister Lib gave a party one night, and I stayed away from home because I was too bashful to face the music. I hung around the house, whistling 'Old Dan Tucker,' dancing to keep my feet warm, watching the beads pop up and down behind the window curtin, and wishing the thundering party would break up, so that I could get to my room. I smoked a bunch of cigars, and, as it was getting late and mighty uncomfortable, I concluded to shin it up the door-post. No sooner said than done, and I soon found myself in bed.—'Now,' said I, 'let her rip; dance till yer wind gives out!' and cuddling under the quilts, Morpheus grabbed me. I was dreaming of soft shell crabs, shrimps, stewed oysters, etc., when somebody knocked at the door. 'Rap.' I laid low. 'Rap, rap, rap!' Then I heard a whispering, and I knew there was a whole raft of girls outside. 'Rap, rap, rap!' Then Lib sings out,

'Jack, are you there?'

'Yes,' says I—then came a roar of laughter.

'Let us in,' says she.

'I wont,' says I.

Then another laugh. By thunder! I began to be riled.

'Can't you let a fellow alone?'

'Are you abed?' says she.

'I am,' says I.

'Get up,' said she.

'I won't,' says I.

Then another laugh.

'Get out you petticoated scarecrows,' I cried, 'can't you get a beau without pulling a fellow out of bed? I wont go home with you, I wont, so you may clear out!' and throwing a boot at the door, I felt better.

But presently, oh! mortal buttons, I heard a still small voice very much like my sister Lib's, and it said:

'Jack, you will have to get up, for all the girl's things are in there.'

Good gracious! what a pickle! think of me in bed, all covered over with muffs, shawls, bonnets and cloaks, and twenty girls at the door waiting to get in. If I had had time to think I should have fainted on the spot; as it was I rolled out among the bonnet ware and ribbons in a hurry. Smash went the millinery in every direction. I had to dress in the dark, for there was a hole in the door, and girls will peep, and the way I fumbled about was death to straw hats.

The moment came; I opened the door and found myself right among the women.

'Oh, my dear leghorn!' cried one; 'my dear, darling little beaver!' cried another; and they pitched and pulled, this way and that, and one bright-eyed little piece, "Sal," her name was, put her arms around my neck and kissed me right in the mouth. Human nature couldn't stand that, and I gave her as good as she sent. It was the first time I ever got a taste, and it was powerful good. I believe I could have kissed that gal from Julius Caesar to the 4th of July.

'Jack,' said she, 'we are sorry to disturb you, but wont you see me home?'

'Yes, I will,' said I. And I did, and I had another smake at the gate, too.

After that we took a kinder turtle-doving after each other; both of us sighed like a barrel of cider when we were away from each other.

It was at the close of a glorious summer day—the sun was setting behind a distant hog-pen, and the chickens were going to roost, the bull-frogs were commencing their evening song, the pollywogs in their native mud-puddles were preparing themselves for the shades of night, and Sal and myself sat upon an antiquated backlog, listening to the music of nature: such as tree toads roosters, grunting pigs, and now and then the mellow music of a distant jackass was wafted to our ears, by the gentle zephyrs that sighed among the mullein stocks, and come heavily laden with the delicious odor of hen-roosts and pig-styes. The last lingering rays of the setting sun, glancing from the brass buttons of a solitary horseman, shone through a knot-hole in the hog-pen, full in Sal's face, dyeing her hair to an orange-peel hue, and showing off my threadbare coat to a bad advantage. One of my arms was around her waist my hand resting on the small of her back—she was toying with my jet black locks of auburn hue. She was almost gone, and I was ditto. She looked like a grasshopper dying with the hic-coughs, and I felt like a mud-turtle choked to death with a codfish ball.

'Sal,' says I, in a voice as musical as dying swan, 'will you have me?'

She turned her eyes heavenward, clasped me by the hand, had an attack of the heaves and blind staggers, and with a sigh she drew her shoe strings to her throat, and said 'yes.' She gave clear out and squatted in my lap—I hugged her until I broke both of my suspenders, and her breath smelt of onions ate the day before. Well, to make a long story short, she sot the day, and we practiced for four weeks, every night, how we would walk into the room to get married, till we got so that we could walk as graceful as a couple of muscovy ducks.

The night, the company and the minister came; the signal was given, and arm in arm we marched through the crowded hall. We were just entering the parlor door, when down I went kerslap on the oil cloth, pulling Sal after me. Some cussed fellow dropped a bananna skin on the floor and floored me. It split a awful hole in my cassimeres, right under my coat tail. It was too late to back out, so clapping my hands over it, we marched in and were spliced. Taking a seat, I watched the bride-kissing operation. My groomsman was tight, and he kissed her until I got up to take a slice, when oh, horror! a little six-year-old imp had crawled up behind me, and pulling my shirt through the hole in my pants, had pinned it to the chair, and in jumping up, I displayed to the admiring gaze of the astonished multitude, a trifle more white muslin than was allowable. I was finally put to bed, when all my troubles ended.

Maternal Murders.

Maternal murders are numberless. Women, the light of whose life has gone out with their dead child, nevertheless have killed the creature they were told by nature to protect, as effectually, if less consciously, than if they had strangled it with their own hands. Improper food, and too much of it—we will not speak of those poor mothers who give their children too little; that is generally a matter of necessity, not choice—murder by circumstance, not action; insufficient clothing, because of the vanity which must have them fashionable and 'nice;' late hours, theatres, crowded halls, wine and strong soups at an age when they should have only milk and farinaceous food; sometimes the hardening system carried out with such Spartan severity that the tender life droops under it, and dies like a flower in the frost; somtimes the careful system exaggerated to a point that saps the strength and weakens the fibre like wax before the fire; sometimes education begun so early and pushed so far that the over-strained brain gives way, and the youthful prodigy drones through life as a mature dunce, maybe an idiot, or maybe flashes out altogether in brain fever. All these are the methods employed so unconsciously, yet so criminally, by doing which, mothers murder their young, and make their own lives desolate. But who can interfere? Children are born into the world for the pleasure of their parents, not for the good of society, nor for their own well-being. Fathers and mothers are absolute; and, provided there is no malice and no direct action, they are able to kill their children indirectly and by ignorance, without prevention or rebuke.

If this is true of parents, it is equally so of schoolmasters and schoolmistresses. The marval is here, not how many children die, but how many escape.

ON THE WING—NO. 16

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT AT EASTON, PRIZE TAKEN BY A BLIND PUPIL.

We could but think while riding through the Lebanon Valley that the country never looked better, more charming then on Tuesday the last day of June. The wheat fields white to the harvest, in a very few instances the reaper was at work. The crop of wheat was of the finest quality, and most abundant on the ground. The grass was not cut, when the wheat seemed quite ready for garner. The corn promises quite as abundant a crop as the wheat. Fruit is as abundant as the grain; taken as a whole '74 must be looked upon as a success in the direction of crops. In the lower part of the valley, as far as the eye could reach, even to the very summit of the distant hills, the rich, golden grain was waving in the sun. We saw many places where steam was puffing up, showing the miner was at work digging wealth from beneath, as the farmer was from the surface above. We came to the conclusion before we arrived at Easton that the Dutch had taken Pennsylvania, as a very large proportion of the population is of German origin. In and around Easton it is still more evident. If a person wishes to obtain a position in a store as a clerk, the first question is, can you speak dutch? And all through the region it is dinging in your ear. If this were the real German language, one could not find so much fault. But it is Pennsylvania dutch. That is, it is a mixture of English and a poor German forming a conglomeration worse than either. A German in Nittany valley once said to me: We talk German in our family, and when my daughters go into society they are afraid to engage in conversation, for fear of making mistakes in the English. The German people of Pennsylvania retain the practice of speaking a German tongue which the fatherland would despise, and the sooner they forget it, the better for the coming generation. We found our genial friend Dr. Hamill on the train bound for Easton to attend the meeting of the trustees of the college, as the commencement took place the next day. One could easily see something was going on as there seemed an extra amount of life in the cars and in the streets. The business of closing up the college year occupied Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Tuesday evening there was a lecture from Secretary Robeson, in the Opera House, a crowded house and a good lecture. The Secretary handled his subject much better than he would a man-of-war.

The Alumni, met Tuesday afternoon and was addressed by J. P. Boyd of Phila., Editor of the Peoples Journal, and during his remarks spoke against too rigid adherence to creeds, and in favor of a more liberal theology, thus holding up Swing as the exponent of orthodoxy. This was more than the brethren could easily swallow. Rev. Mr. Porter, of Newark, Delaware, moved "that part of the address be not approved." After quite a debate the resolution was laid on the table, by a bare majority. It was a most ungracious act, to thus attempt to saddle a young institution with a load which older ones refuse to carry. An attempt was made, during the debate on the resolution, to show that it was a revival of the old controversy buried by the re-union of the two branches of the Presbyterian church. But this was too thin, for the new School brethren did not own the matter. This was only the unpleasant occurrence of the most delightful exercises. The famous Gilmore, with his famous band, was at his post at an early hour, and made the streets echo with the sweet music from Yankee land. There seems to have been an unusual interest manifested this year, in the commencement exercises. Promptly at the appointed hour, the procession was formed, headed by the band, and proceeded to the chapel in Pardee Hall. Very many were unable to enter. The graduating class consisted of thirty three who received the degree A. B. Centre county took the second honor of the class, in the person of Mr. S. L. Stiver. To him was assigned the Latin Oration which was well delivered and well received by an appreciative audience. The Valedictory was delivered by Mr. J. H. Williams. We had one dutch oration, but it was real German, and one oration in the Welsh language, which was understood by very few. The exercises were interspersed with choice music. In order to encourage the attainment of a high degree of scientific culture, prizes are annually awarded to those who excel in the various branches assigned. Among those who took the prizes was a Mr. H. H. Jackson of Brookiyn, N. Y., blind from his birth. He took two of the Harvey prizes, one in the English of Shakespeare, and the other in the Early English Text, or Saxon literature. He was kindly led by the hand to receive the prize. A strange sensation was experienced by the audience, as the blind man wended his way to presidential presence to receive a prize which he could not see, and from sympathizing hands that could only be perceived by the touch, and for mastering a study which the sense of hearing alone could conquer. It was no child's play to enter into such a contest with both eyes wide open; youthful minds met on this difficult field, and the blind man won the fight. As others carried away the hard earned prizes, the audience cheered them, but cheers could not express the feelings, silence was more fitting, in the presence of the blind scholar. He has taught the young, who have eyes, how to use them, and blind men, how much happiness and joy may be experienced in the cultivation of the mind.

At the close of the chapel exercises, the procession re-formed and marched to a large hall in the borough of Easton to partake of a repast which was prepared by the ladies of Easton. There were three hundred and twenty tickets issued and all were in place. At the head of the table sat Dr. Cattell, Ex-Gov. Pollock, Gen. Patterson, Mr. Pardee and old Dr. Musgrave. It was evident an effort had been made to have a big time. Gov. Pollock presided, and performed his part admirably. Some thought Gen. Patterson made a better speaker than General, certainly he was not behind time. Mr. Pardee was called upon, and after the cheering and clapping had subsided, he modestly rose, and said people might look at him but he could not speak. Hundreds of eyes were fixed upon the man for a moment who had given nearly half a million dollars to help the sun of prosperity to shine upon Lafayette College! For a moment this generous man stood in silence, and then quietly sat down amid the most tumultuous applause. We could but feel the eloquence of one of nature's noble men. He is a man of deeds and not of words. His name will be remembered while the love of learning lasts. The speaking was kept up till quite late in the afternoon, a right merry time, and closed with old Hundred. The exercises of the week have done much to raise the college in the public esteem. A large class will enter in the coming term.

Iron in the Blood.

PERUVIAN SYRUP (AN IRON TONIC)

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE — FREE FROM ALCOHOL — PURELY — DR. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA — EUREKA

VINEGAR BITTERS

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bitters are a purely Vegetable preparation, made chiefly from the native herbs found on the lower ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. The question is almost daily asked, "What is the cause of the unparalleled success of VINEGAR BITTERS?" Our answer is, that they remove the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health. They are the great blood purifier and a life-giving principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the remarkable qualities of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to. They are a gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

The properties of DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS are Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Diuretic, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Alterative, and Anti-Bilious.

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent, and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ringworms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelminitics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

GENERAL JOHN PATTON.

We would have it distinctly understood that the republicans of this Senatorial District intend to place in the field a candidate for State Senator. Although the democracy claim, and have heretofore carried a large majority, yet such is the turbulent and jealous spirit of rivalry in different sections of the district, that a good man on the republican side could be elected.

In this district, the contest will not be between the republican and democratic parties. There are other questions of difference that will overshadow party prejudices. The fact that Hon. L. A. Mackey will be forced on the ticket for Congress, will be corn in the republican hopper. His national bank prejudices—himself president of the Lock Haven National Bank—his presidency of the B. E. V. Railroad, which charges our farmers six cents a bushel per mile for wheat and other grain—these facts we say will compel all independent farmers and many others to use every effort to defeat him. If grangers will vote for a man with that record, then we say the grangers are milk-sops and playthings for politicians. And this is precisely the footing on which W. A. Wallace, Esq., stands with relation to the Senate. Trouble has already commenced on his account in his own county. The Vice President of the Southern Pacific Railroad, the National bank man, the millionaire, has accomplished some Herculian tasks in his time, but among the most difficult of all of them will be to get the delegates of his own county for State Senator this fall. He is the leader of one wing which numbers about one half the democracy of the county. We suppose he might get the delegates of his own wing, but of the democracy, never. Two sets of the senatorial delegates will attend the conference, we have no doubt, and the result is sure to make Clearfield a cipher at the polls.

In view of these facts—for facts they are—it is plain that with a good man on the senatorial ticket of the republican party—a man whose interests are allied with those of the people of the district, the chances for success are certainly not discouraging. We have such a man in the district, in Clearfield county, in the person of General John Patton. He is well known all over the state and to almost every individual, in the district. General Patton is not a politician, he is a farmer, a lumberman, a private citizen and one of the best men in the state. We challenge any man to say aught against him. He is an able, liberal, christian gentleman and an honest man. If the republicans will nominate him as their candidate for State Senator and he accepts the nomination, we will insure him a majority in Clearfield county if Wallace is nominated against him, and if the farmers of Clinton and Centre will be true to their interests, will vote for their rights as against monopolies and professional politicians, if the grangers will be true to their principles of their order Patton will be triumphantly elected, and another step will have been taken in favor of the people and against monopolies, high freights, and corruption.

——Mr. Frank Platt, assisting Professor Leslie, superintendent of the State geological survey, visited the Morrisdale and Decatur collieries near Philipsburg last Tuesday, says the Journal.

BELLEFONTERS AT SARATOGA.—A number of ladies and gentlemen from town started on a two weeks excursion to Saratoga and other points. They intend to visit, on their way, Minnequa, Elmira, Watkins, Binghamton, Albany, Saratoga (where they will remain several days) Lake George, and return via the Hudson to New York and thence home. The party consists of Governor Curtin, wife and daughter, E. C. Humes, wife and daughter, T. R. Reynolds, wife and daughter, William P. Wilson and wife, A. O. Furst and wife, Miss Ella Hays, Miss Sallie Hagerman, Miss Marion Millikin, Isaac Mitchell, P. Benner. Wilson. Such a party of jolly people cannot fail of having a good time.

——The partnership heretofore existing between S. S. Lyon and James Welch in the Book, Stationery and Fancy goods business, was dissolved by mutual consent on Monday last. The business will be carried on as usual by Mr. James Welch, who as liquidating partner, and will collect all outstanding claims and settle all the firm debts. Mr. Welch has made his book store an ornament and a valuable acquisition to the town and deserves the liberal patronage of the community.

——The engineer corps of the Pa. and Western railroad engaged in working the preliminary survey, passed through Philipsburg last week.

—Everywhere the Democracy are theoretically in favor of temperance principles, but opposed to reducing them to practice.

ON THE WING—NO. 17

INTERESTING TO TEACHERS OF CENTRE COUNTY.

While running through the eastern part of the state, I have taken pains to watch the educational interests of this portion of Pennsylvania. People frequently say, "How much better the schools of New England are than those of the Middle States; how much better the schools of Philadelphia than those of other portions of the State." But the principles of the human mind are the same in one place as another. The books are the same, the principles of teaching are the same, other things being equal teachers are the same. People pass so rapidly from one part of our country to another, that improvements in teaching, as in any other science, readily diffuse themselves over the land, as water seeks its level. Schools are better in large places for two reasons, better talent may be employed because better wages are paid, and men make teaching a profession. Another reason, the burden of discipline is, in a great measure, taken from the shoulders of the teachers. Two or three vicious scholars cannot bid defiance to a teacher in a school in Philadelphia. "Obey or leave," is the order of a well-governed school room established and enforced by the authorities. Of course I speak of large pupils. There will be better schools in large centres for these reasons. But what I desired to tell the teachers of your county about is an examination in Easton. It was a matter of a great deal of interest when I found I could enjoy such a prilege. There were over forty schools to supply with teachers, running from the primary to the High School. Being familiar with the mode of examining in the centre of the state, I desired to see if anything could be learned in this regard. The weather was warm and uncomfortable. The examination took place in a large room, with black-board extending across one side of the room. The Superintendent arrived and announced the rules governing the exercises of the day. The examination began with spelling twenty-five words; the words were given out by the superintendent and written down by the teachers, the paper was folded, name of teacher written upon it, and passed to the Superintendent. Then came the grammar.—There is not a word. There were ten questions written on the board and numbered. The teachers were to write out the answers in numerical order, fold their paper, sign it and pass it to the Superintendent. Question 1. "What is a co-ordinate sentence and a subordinate sentence? Give illustrations of each," This will serve to give an illustration of the exercise in grammar, carrying the the class through the upper region of this difficult science. The thought occurred to me, there is not one question in the ten adapted to draw out the practical knowledge of the class in grammar. Toward night the examination had drawn its tiresome length to the "Theory and practice of teaching."

These questions were so extraordinary that I took the pains to copy them entire, and send them for the benefit of the teachers among the mountains. Here they are, verbatim et literatim:

1 State in their logical order the general divisions of the faculties of the human mind.

2 Name the several intellectual faculties in the order of their development.

3 Of what kind of knowledge is the mind first susceptible?

4 In the work of education, to what should the effort be directed, and what subjects of study would best subserve the purpose?

5 How is language first learned, and what means are adapted to its culture?

6. How many and what are the sources of knowledge? Illustrate by examples showing the kind derived from each source.

7. Define the inductive and deductive methods of teaching, and state when and why you would employ the one in preference to the other.

8 How are the capacities of the mind increased, and what essential lies at the foundation of its growth?

9 What conditions are requisite to the work of teaching?

10 State what intellectual and practical advantage is derived from a knowledge of drawing?

These questions closed the day's work, and we came to the conclusion that teachers who could stand the ordeal of such a trial, ought to command a salary of fifteen hundred dollars. To answer the questions well, which were written on the board that day, would make the graduate in college appear at a good advantage. The class was dismissed with the order to meet in the morning to finish up the work, and at twelve o'clock next day the class was dismissed to wait till the last of the month to know their fate. And after the class are commissioned, and shall spend ten long months in faithful work, the same painful task must be gone over again. No matter how well they acquit themselves as teachers this Rubicon of painful toil must be passed over again. There must be a fresh imolation of the sensative feelings of young ladies on the altars of these gods of education. There is something wrong in this whole matter. A teacher who is fit to receive a certificate, after teaching with success for a year, is certainly fit to go on without being compelled to pass an annual, and painful trial to settle the question of his fitness. If he was fit last year, he is certainly as fit after a year's teaching. But no this horrid night-mare must annually ride rough shod over the most faithful class of public servants that ever labored for the public good. And many of our Superintendents become such, not because they are fit for the sacred work, but because they belong to this, or that party, or are good at pulling wires before the election. I have seen superintendents who had as little regard for the delicate feelings of the teachers while being examined as an elephant would have for the delicate flowers upon which he treads his ruthless foot. These are not the feelings of the writer of this article alone, for the same feelings are expressed in every part of the state. "Coming events cast their shadows before them." There is a wide-spread, deep-seated feeling of dissatisfaction with some of the features of our school law. There is a very general feeling that county superintendents cannot in the nature of the case, render an equivalent for the money they receive. The position is looked upon as a sinecure, and is contended for with the same bitter partisan zeal which crops out in the struggles for political preferment. A prominent superintendent in the eastern part of Pennsylvania expressed the sentiment, though in a different form, which I have here expressed. For fear of being misunderstood, I must say, these remarks have no reference to our worthy superintendent, for my intercourse with him has been of the most agreeable character. The county superintendency in New England has long since been abolished for the reasons above mentioned. A change is inevitable. However faithful a superintendent may be, with two hundred and twenty schools to visit in one hundred days, he will feel sad that he can see so little of their working, and at the close of the year feel he has done so little in return for the salary received.

But to return to the examination again. The class felt very much discouraged when the trial was over. They knew the record was a sad one, and they returned home with heavy hearts. One of the teachers was heard to say in tones of discouragement, "I don't know anything." The next day I walked across the Delaware to see how they do things in Jersey. There the questions are uniform all over the state, and in three grades, primary, intermediate and high school. These questions are printed by the Department at Trenton, and sent to the superintendents of the counties. The teacher takes his choice of grade and is commissioned accordingly. All teachers stand on an equal footing. The whims of county officers, or little spites, which human nature sometimes exhibits, even in officers in educational circles, cannot be brought to bear. But I will close now by saying we have as good schools in Centre county as in Northampton, and as good teachers too.

For the REPUBLICAN.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.

In accordance with the call of the Executive Committee of the Open Temperance Union to convene at Unionville, Centre Co., Pa., July 23, 1874, a large delegation of the friends of temperance assembled in the Presbyterian Church, of the above named place, at 2 P. M. The Convention was called to order by the Vice-President of the O. T. U., Rev. W. Meminger, of Milesburg. Prayer by Rev. T. Barnhart, and singing by the choir. The circular implying the call was read by the chairman, and a motion passed that a committee of three, consisting of Revs. Smyser, Barnhart and James Alexander, be appointed to nominate officers for the Convention. While the committee retired the choir entertained the large assembly with singing. The chairman of the committee then reported the following named persons as officers of the Convention, viz: President, Albert Owen, of Philipsburg; Vice-President, Dr. J. M. Blair, of Unionville; Secretary, Rev. J. Zeigler, of Milesburg; Treasurer, R. Conly, of Benner twp. The report was accepted and the officers elected.

An address was made by the Chair, appreciatory of the honors conferred by the appointment, after which a roll was made out of all the delegates from various organizations, townships and boroughs throughout the county, which on account of its length is here omitted; suffice it to say that Unionville with Union township, Milesburg and Bellefonte were largely represented. Other delegations were present from Howard borough and township, Philipsburg, the townships of Benner, Boggs, Curtin, Half Moon, Harris, Spring, Snow Shoe, Huston, Ferguson, Pattor, and from Williamsport, Lycoming County, in the person of Rev. Slcafoose, by special invitation.

Rev. D. C. Babcock, Corresponding Secretary of The State Temperance Union, from Philadelphia, then addressed the Convention. The speaker first considered the "General Aspects of the Cause." The success is greater than was anticipated; there has been nothing lost from the beginning. A new form of operation has been brought to bear in the interests of the cause by the formation of a "Lecture Bureau," which points were clearly and forcibly laid before the Convention, followed by an able and well set forth consideration of the specific workings of the great Prohibitory Movement, inspiring his audience with new vigor in their efforts to put down the evil of intemperance. Singing by the choir. A circular received by the Convention from the Hon. James Black was read by the Secretary, after which a committee of five, consisting of W. Meminger, M. L. Smyser, J. M. Blair, T. Barnhart and H. L. Harvey were appointed to draft resolutions. While these retired the choir sang several pieces, and Rev. Hamill, D.D., made a short address from the gallery. As the Doctor was closing his remarks the committee reappeared, and the chairman reported the first four of the series of resolutions herewith given. The report was accepted and the committee continued for the evening session.

A statement was made of the expenses of the Convention, and seventeen dollars and twenty-six cents were contributed at the first opportunity. Adjourned to meet at 6 P. M.

At about 6.30 P. M. the Convention re-assembled and was called to order by the Chairman. Prayer by Rev. W. T. Wylie, of Bellefonte. Singing by the choir. The committee on resolutions then submitted as their entire report the following weighty resolutions, which received due and seperate consideration, occupying most of the evening, and participated in by many earnest advocates of temperance, and were adopted one by one, and finally as a whole.

1st. Resolved, That without party prejudices, objects or designs, we, as friends of temperance, and as representatives of that public sentiment expressed by the ballot on the merits of the Local Option Law in this county, ask each and every political convention to nominate candidates as representatives in the State Legislature who are pledged and known to be friends of the great temperance movement of the day.

2d. Resolved, That as true friends of temperance we pledge ourselves that, without regard to party, we will support such candidates for the legislature as are known to be in favor of the Local Option Law as it is, and with such additional legislation as may make it more efficient.

3d. Resolved, That in justice to our firm convictions of positive duty, and in justice to the great principle of reform which we here represent, that wherever nominations are made regardless of, or antagonistic to the great growing and vital principles of temperance, we, the representatives thereof, will feel in duty bound to call conventions and urge the nomination of candidates who are known and pledged to the cause we support,

4th. Resolved, That we deem the call for a convention to meet at Harrisburg on the 12th of August, 1874, to nominate candidates for State officers, and to which we have been requested to send delegates, as premature, and not adapted to secure the best interests of the cause of prohibition.

5th. Resolved, That this Convention is opposed to any nominations by the State Temperance Convention, except in the event of existing parties failing to nominate such men as will carry out the objects aimed at by this Convention, believing that such a course would defeat the very object had in view.

6th. Resolved, That copies of the two immediately preceeding resolutions be forwarded by the Secretary of this Convention to S. B. Chase, President of the 12th of Aug. convention, to Hon. James Black, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and to Col. Geo. McFarland, editor of the Temperance Vindicator, as representing the sentiment of a district which gave a unanimous vote against license.

7th. Resolved, That we recognize the efficiency and heartily endorse the "Woman's Temperance Movement," and earnestly call upon the temperance women throughout the county to organize and emulate the noble example of their sisters in Williamsport, Pittsburgh and elsewhere.

8th. Resolved, That the civil officers of this county are expected and earnestly requested to see that the liquor laws of this commonwealth be rigidly enforced against all violators; and we pledge ourselves to give them our hearty co-operation and support in the enforcement thereof.

9th. Resolved, That the Secretary be requested to furnish the proceedings of this Convention to the county papers for publication.

10th. Resolved, That the friends of temperance in the several boroughs and townships of this county be requested to send to the Secretary of this Convention for printed forms, and immediately organize according to the constitution of the "Open Temperance Union," and hold frequent meetings.

11th. Resolved, That we hail the establishment of the "Pennsylvania Temperance Lecture Bureau," explained to us by its superintendent, as a move in the right direction, and express hope that it will do great good.

12th. Resolved, That when this Convention adjourns, it adjourns to meet in Bellefonte at the call of the officers.

13th. Resolved, That this Convention tender their sincere thanks to the citizens of Unionville for their hospitality towards its members.

Remarks were made by Gen. Blair and others in behalf of the cause.

As the former president of the Open Temperance Union had resigned his office, it was deemed expedient to elect another, accordingly Rev. W. Meminger, its present Vice-President, was elected President, and D. P. Shope, Esq., Vice-President. Singing by two ladies from Unionville accompanied with instrumental music. Adjourned to meet at Bellefonte sine die.

ALBERT OWEN, President.

J. ZEIGLER, Secretary.

P. S.—The ladies and gentlemen connected with the various Sabbath Schools and churches throughout the county have the sincere thanks of the committee who called this Convention, for their prompt attention, assuring them that their names will be recorded upon the minutes of the Open Temperance Union. SEC.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

—Young America is one of the best journals for children we know. Its continued fund of entertainment for juveniles, combined with the low price of $1 per year, and a premium to each subscriber, should ensure its reception by all families. The August issue is now to hand replete as usual with good pen food for young minds. Published by W. Jennings Demorest 17 E. 14th St., New York.

—The papers most read in the August number of Old and New, will be two namely: Mr. Hale's graceful and lively translation of the sweet old Provencal love-story of "Aucassin and Nicolette," and Mr. Martineau's powerful and striking exposition of the contrasts between the Gospel John and the preceeding three, Mr. Martineau, dwelling upon the mystic, if not Gnostic features of the Fourth Evangelist, and contracting them, as well as the language, with the peculiarly Hebrew traits of the Revelation, concludes with great force of reasoning that the two books were not written by the same person, and that the Gospel of John was written later than is usually supposed. Mr. Tyrwhitt's art series continues; Mr. Trollope's novel goes forward with more narratives of contemporary English rascality and noodledoms of high and low degree; There are other good reviews of books, some useful, socialogical discussions; On the whole, it is both spirited and entertaining.

MANY who are suffering from the effects of the warm weather and are debilitated, are advised by physicians to take moderate amounts of whiskey two or three times during the day. In a little while those who adopt this advice frequently increase the number of "drinks," and in time become confirmed inebriates. A beverage which will not create thirst for intoxicating liquors, and which is intended especially for the benefit of debilitated persons, whether at home or abroad is Dr. Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic. Containing the juices of many medical herbs, this preparation does not create an appetite for the intoxicating cup. The nourishing and the life-supporting properties of many valuable natural productions contained in it and well known to medical men have a most strengthening influence. A single bottle of the Tonic will demonstrate its valuable qualities. For debility arising from sickness, over exertion or from any cause whatever, a wine glassful of Sea Weed Tonic taken after meals will strengthen the stomach and create an appetite for wholesome food. To all who are about leaving their homes, we desire to say that the excellent effects of Dr. Schenck's seasonable remedies, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills, are particularly evident when taken by those who are injuriously affected by a change of water and diet. No person should leave home without taking a supply of these safeguards along. For sale by all Druggists. 29-5t

BUSINESS NOTICES.

A FRIEND IN NEED.—Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is a friend in deed. Who has not found it such in curing all diseases of the lungs and throat, coughs, colds, and pulmonary affections, and "last, not least," consumption? The sick are assured that the high standard of excellence on which the popularity of this preparation is based, will always be maintained by the proprietors.

THE relaxing power of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is truly wonderful. Cases are already numerous where bent and stiffened limbs have been limbered and straightened by it. When used for this purpose, the part should be washed and rubbed thoroughly. Apply the liniment cold, and rub it in with the hand.

A crowd of "Horse Men," and others, daily throng the stores in country and town for Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders. They understand that horses cannot be in good condition without them, and with them can be kept on a much less quantity of grain.

SIN IS OFTEN THE RESULT of physical ill health and feeble stomachs. During one-third of our time the process of digestion continues. To be dyspeptic is to be miserable; dyspepsia is the foundation of fevers and all the diseases of the blood, liver, skin and kidneys. Dyspepsia yields to the virtues of the vegetable ingredients in that great purifyer of the blood and restorer of health, DR. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS. 28-4t

Manhood; How Lost, How Restored.

Price in sealed envelope, only six cents.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

THE SEED.

The farmer planted a seed—
A little dry, black seed;
  And off he went to other work,—
  For the farmer never was known to shirk,—
And cared for what he had need.

The night came with its dew—
The cool and silent dew;
  The dawn came, and the day
  And the farmer worked away
At labors not a few.

* * * * *

Home from his work one day—
One glowing summer day—
  His children showed him a perfect flower;
  It had burst in bloom that very hour;
How, I cannot say.

But I know if the smallest seed
In the soil of love be cast;
  Both day and night will do their part;
  And the sower who works with trusting heart,
Will find the flower at last.

History of the Potato Bug.

The potato bug having settled down to hard work in this region a history of the monster will be read with interest:

Originally the home of this insect was exclusively in the Rocky Mountains, where it fed on a species of wild potatoes, (Solanum rostratrum, Dunal,) a plant found only in that region. With the cultivation of the potato in Western Kansas and Colorado it forsook its native food plant (which is insipid and somewhat like our horse nettle,) and adopted the potato. They also feed upon tomato and egg plants, which belong to the same family (Solanacea) as the potato.—They prefer the egg plant to the potato, and the latter to the tomato.

Since 1859 this insect has traveled east from potato patch to potato patch, at the rate of sixty or seventy miles a year. The scientific name of this beetle is "Doryphora ten linesta say," and it should not be confounded with another, very similar in appearance, called by scientists "Doryphora juncta, Germur." The latter, feed exclusively upon the horse nettle (Solanum Carolnense Linn) and never touch the potato. There are three broods, some say five, of the Colorado potato beetle in a season, but as the females continue laying their ova for forty days or more, we have the worms of all sizes during the summer. The first brood was hatched here about the seventh of June, from eggs laid by beetles that passed the winter in the pupa state, in the ground. The different summer broods require about thirty-six days to obtain perfection from the egg. The larva of the last brood remain in the ground all winter, and emerge as perfect beetles in the spring to renew their depredations.

Each female deposits 700 or 800 eggs in groups of twenty-five or thirty on the under side of the leaves; they are of a light yellow color, tinged with venetian red, and have two rows of black spots on the sides; the head and feet are black. The larva usually remain on the under side of the leaves during the day, but I have noticed them congregating in the crown of the plant, among the young and tender leaves. They chiefly injure the potato plant in their larva state, but to keep them within bounds a ceaseless war must be waged on the egg, larva and beetle.

In some parts of the west their ravages threatened to exterminate the potato, and it was only by continued and daily vigilance that the crop could be raised.

Hand picking, in three stages of egg, larva and beetle is a tedious but certain remedy, especially if the resulting collections are subjected to boiling water. Winter plowing of the old patch might do some good by disturbing the fall brood. Poultry, it is said, will not eat the beetles, but some farmers have been benefitted by turning flocks of young turkeys into the potato patch.

They have numerous enemies among insects, but so far they are too prolific to be sensibly diminished by these aids.

Celery.

This delicious and valuable plant can be planted, and ought to be, from now until the first of August. But May is a good time for the early crop and July for the late crop. It can be raised with very little trouble, unless the season be very dry, and much watering is required. Dig trenches four feet apart, and one foot deep and spade wide; dig up the bottom of the trench and cover an inch or two with well rotted stable manure, or barn-yard manure; sprinkle with salt and chop it and intermix well with the soil in the bottom of the trench, and let it remain a week before setting the plant. After a rain draw your plants, trim the roots and broken and decayed leaves, cut the tops off nearly half the length of the stem and plants, water freely, cover the trenches with bushes for a few days from the sun; water every evening until they start to grow. Keep the earth loose about the roots and shave in the sides of the trenches as the plants grow, taking care not to fill in as high as the top of the crown of the plants. Never let it suffer for moisture. Sometimes use liquid manure in the trenches, not on the plants, the same also with water made brackish with salt. It is a plant native to the sea coast. An acre in good celery is worth usually $1,000.

This plant should be grown by everybody more extensively, because everybody likes it, it sells high and is very valuable for its medical curative qualities. Those who habitually use it, fully appreciate its virtues. One who is reliable, thus speaks of its great value as a recuperator of health:

"I have known many men, and women too, who from various causes had become so much affected by nervousness that when they stretched out their hands they shook like aspen leaves on windy days, by the moderate use of the blanched footstalk of celery as a salad became as strong and steady in limb as other people."

Deterioration of Improved Poultry.

When a new breed of fowls is proved to be of real value, and it is proposed to introduce it upon a farm, the way practiced is, nine times out of ten, to purchase a sitting of eggs, and breed the chickens produced, irrespective of relationship. Or, if grown fowls are first bought, they are commonly in pairs or trios related more or less closely; and, having cost a considerable sum, they are multipled all around the neighborhood from that one stock, in-and-in, for perhaps a half dozen years, and they grow weedy and scraggy, the chickens die off from weakness, the owners get sick of the breed, vote them a humbug, and fall back on what they call the "good, old-fashioned sort." There are other deteriorating influences at work. Fancy fowls are sometimes overfed, to produce great size; and pets and favorites are apt to be kept too fat for breeding and anxiety for eggs leads them to too stimulating feed. Choice fowls are almost invariably confined within narrow limits to keep them from mixing with other sorts. There is not enough air, sun and exercise, and they lack certain things to eat which they would select according to their varying needs, if at liberty. Also, there is commonly a hurry to have a costly sort increase, and the eggs of pullets are all saved for hatching, which is a sure way to impair strength. But, on the other hand, the farmer has plenty of eggs of the barn door sort, and the universal practice is to pick out the biggest, which are the produce of the old matrons of the flock, have a rich yolk, and make hardy chickens. The valuable breeds were improved only by time and pains, and without care being taken to keep them up to the pitch to which they have been raised, they will relapse to the dead level of average worthlessness, or sink below it.

INSECTS IN THE GARDEN.—We publish below a plan for destroying insects, from one of our correspondents: "My method of destroying bugs, worms and other insects in the garden is to raise ducks and turkeys. I find that little turkeys are keen sighted, and insects must be very small to escape their notice. Ducks also, both great and small, consume large quantities of insects, and they will search around plants for the cut worm, and soon clear a garden of this pest. From my own experience I consider young turkeys and ducks the best of insect scavengers, and I would advise those who have never tried such aids to make one experiment in that direction, and see if I am not correct."

COLIC IN HORSES.—A correspondent of the Western Farm Journal grinds a tablespoonful of caraway seed, makes tea of it, and drenches the horse. He blankets the horse and keeps him warm. Three doses are sufficient for the worst cases. Mix a little of the seed with the feed, to lesson the liability to the disease.

TO PREVENT THE RUSTING OF IRON.—A correspondent of the "Boston Journal" says: "I have tried many things, but found nothing better than boiled linceed oil to protect instruments and tools, (files, saws, guns, etc.,) from rusting. It even works better with a kettle used for heating water for bathing. Wipe the metal with a cloth dipped in the oil, and let it dry, which will require only a few minutes. If it is not necessary to have iron bright and shining, you need not scour it before the application of the oil; this will combine with the rust and form a firm, durable coating."

To polish brass rub the metal with rotten stone and sweet oil, then rub off with a piece of cotton flannel, and polish with soft leather. A solution of oxalic acid rubbed over tarnished brass soon removes the tarnish, rendering the metal bright. The acid must be washed off with water, and the brass rubbed with whiting and soft leather. A mixture of muriatic and alum dissolved in water imparts a golden color to brass articles that are steeped in it for a few seconds.

Miscellany.

THE MOTHER'S LAST LESSON.—A mother lay dying. Her little son, not knowing of the sorrow coming to him, went as his custom to her chamber door, saying:

"Please teach me my verse, mamma, and then kiss me good night! I am very sleepy, but no one has heard me say my prayers."

"Hush!" said a lady who was watching beside her. "Your dear mother is too ill to hear you to-night" and coming forward, she sought gently to lead him from the room. Roger began to sob as if his heart would break.

"I cannot go to bed without saying my prayers—indeed, I cannot."

The ear of the dying mother caught the sound. Although she had been insensible to everything around her, the sob of her darling aroused her stupor, and, turning to her friend, she desired her to bring her little son to her. Her request was granted, and the child's golden hair and rosy cheeks nestled beside the cold face of his dying mother.

"My son," she whispered, "repeat this verse after me, and never forget it: "When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord will take me up." The child repeated it two or three times, and said his little prayer. Then he kissed the cold face, and went quickly to bed.

In the morning he came, as usual to his mother, but found her still and cold.

This was her last lesson. He has never forgotten it, and probably never will, as long as he lives.

BREAKING IT GENTLY.—"Yes, I remember that anecdote," the Sunday school superintendent said, with the old pathos in his voice, and the old sad look in his eyes. "It was about a simple creature named Higgins, who used to haul rock for old Maltby. When the lamented Judge Bagley tripped and fell down the Court-house stairs and broke his neck, it was a question how to brake the news to poor Mrs. Bagley. But finally the body was put into Higgin's wagon, and he was instructed to take it to Mrs. Bagley, but to be very guarded and discreet in his language, and not to break the news to her at once, but do it gradually and gently. When Higgins got there with his sad freight, he shouted till Mrs. Bagley came to the door.

Then he said, "Does the Widder Bagley live here?"

"The Widow Bagley? No sir!"

"I'll bet she does. But never mind, it aint for me to contradict. Is the Judge in?"

"No, not at present."

"I just expected as much. Because you know-take hold o'satin', mum for I'm going to make a little communication, and I reckon maybe it'll jar you some. There's been an accident mum. I've got the old judge curled up here in the wagon, and when you see him you'll acknowledge yourself that an inquest is about the only thing that could be a comfort to him.—Mark Twain.

ARE YOU REGISTERED?—The ten days assessment business is abolished by the new Constitution, and all voters must be registered sixty days before the election. As the election is to take place on the 3rd day of November, it will be well for every voter to know that he is registered by the first day of September.

Newspapers.

Hostile newspapers are more to be dreaded than a hundred thousand bayonets.—Bonaparte.

A newspaper can drop the same thought into a thousand minds at the same moment.—De Toqueville.

Give me the liberty to know, to alter, and to argue freely, according to conscience, above all liberties.—Milton.

I would rather live in a country with newspapers and without a government, than in a country with government but without newspapers.—Jefferson.

Ever enlightening, always confirming grand truths, ever baptizing infant peoples, and always new.—Archbishop Hughes.

Armed with the liberty of the press, * * * * I will shake down from its height corruption, and bury it amidst the ruins of the abuse it was meant to shelter.—Sheridan.

In the United States every worthy citizen reads a newspayer, and owns the paper he reads. * * * A good newspaper will keep a sensible man in sympathy with the world's current history. It is an ever-unfolding encyclopædia—an unbound book forever issuing and never finished.—Beecher

A Taste for Reading.

Every young man entering upon life ought to give some portion of his time regularly to the development of his mind, to the gaining of useful information, and to the cultivation of some innocent and ennobling taste. A taste for reading is worth more than any sum we could name. A rich man without that or some other taste does not know how to enjoy his money. His only resource is to keep on making money, unless he prefers to spend it. A well-known millionaire used to say that he would gladly give it all, if he could only himself have the education which his lazy and stupid boy refused to acquire. Make it a rule—never to be broken—to devote at least half an hour a day to the reading of some useful book—not stories chiefly. Stories are good in their places; but every man needs a knowledge of history, the elements of science and other subjects; and, if he has only half an hour to give to reading, be will be very foolish to give it to novels. Be hungry and thirsty after knowledge of all kinds, and be sure that you will be none the worse, but all the better, as business men.

WHY NOT SUCCESSFUL.—The young clerk marries and takes a house, which he proceeds to furnish twice as expensively as he can afford, and then his wife, instead of striving to help him earn a livelihood, by doing her own work, must have a servant to help her spend his limited earnings. Ten years afterwards he will be found struggling under a load of debt and children, wondering why the luck was always against him, while his friends regret his unhappy destitution of financial ability. The world is full of people who can't imagine why they don't prosper like their neighbors, when the real obstacle is not in banks, tariffs, bad public policy or hard times, but their own extravagance and heedless ostentation.

'How much better it would have been to have shaken hands and allow it was all a mistake,' said a Detroit Judge. 'Then the lion and the lamb would have lain down together, and white robed peace would have fanned you with her wings, elevated you with the smiles of her approbation. But no you went to clawing and bitting and rolling in the mud, and here you are. It's $5 apiece.'

Miscellaneous.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Your attention is specially invited to the fact that the National Banks are now prepared to receive subscription to the Capital Stock of the Centennial Board of Finance. The funds realized from this source are to be employedin the erection of the buildings for the International Exhibition, and the expenses connected with the same. It is confidently believed that the Keystone State will be represented by the name of every citizen alive to patriotic commemoration of the one hundred birth-day of the nation. The shares of stock are offered for $10 each, and subscribers will recieve a handsomely steel engraved Certificate of Stock, suitable for framing and preservation as a national memorial.

Interest at the rate of six per cent per annm will be paid on all payments of Centenial Stock from date of payment to January 1, 1876.

Subscribers who are not near a National Bank can remit a check or post-office order to the undersigned.

SAMUEL H. KUNES, Proprietor.

Having purchased the old Daniel Kunes stand, I have entirely refitted and overhauled the house, and put it in first class order, and have made it one of the best hotels in Centre County. Large and commodious stables are in connection with the house, and teams will be faithfully and carefully attended to. A good board walk has been constructed from the depot to the Eagleville Hotel, and, it being away from the depot a convenient distance, it is the most desirable and pleasant hotel in Eagleville for the travelling public.

THE CANARY AT CHURCH.

They were singing good old "London"
As the evening, cool and sweet,
Drifted with purple shadows
Adown the city street.

Round every church's window
The lusty ivy clung;
The red, faint sunshine flickered
Its matchless leaves among.

The dim nave, with its arches
And clustered pillars rare.
Had echoed to the cadence
Of the pale rector's prayer.

And now, throgh tender silence,
The thrilling flute-notes rang;
And sweet as angels' voices
The rare old tune they sang.

When sudden, lo! appearing
On carving quaint and old,
Like fair astray from heaven,
Fluttered a speck of gold.

On to the lectern flying,
Up to the Bishop's chair,
With clear notes soaring, chanting
His wondrous vespers there.

Full rolled the singing voices,
Yet sweeter, richer, higher,
God's silver-throated chorister,
Outsang the trained choir.

God Will Take Care of You.

A gentleman walking along one of the streets of Philadelphia was accosted by a boy who pleaded for a penny The gentleman was at first inclined to send him away, but something in the boy's face forbade that, so he asked.—

"What do you want to do with a penny?"

"Buy bread sir," was promptly answered. "Have you had nothing to eat to-day' "Nothing sir." "Boy are you telling me the truth?" asked the gentleman looking him steadily in the face. "Indeed I am, sir."

"Have you a father?" questioned the gentleman, now thoroughly interested in the boy. "No sir, father is dead." "Where is your mother?" "She died last night. Come with me and I will show you where my mother is."

Taking the hand of the boy the gentleman followed his guide down a narrow alley, and stopped before a miserable place which the boy called home. Pushing open a door he pointed to his dead mother, and said.—"There is my mother, sir." "Who was with your mother when she died?" asked the gentleman deeply moved, "Nobody but me sir." "Did your mother say anything before she died ?" "Yes sir she said:—'God will take care of my son.' "

Sooner than his dying mother had dared hope, God had honored her faith by sending to her son one whose heart was touched with tenderest pity for his condition. The gentleman was a Christian, to whom God had entrusted much of of this world's goods, and the little orphan was kindly cared for by him. God in his Word is called the Father of the fatherless. He has said that none of them that trust him shall be desolate, and it is safe to trust in his promises.

The Religion We Want.

We want a religion that bears heavily, not only on the "exceeding sinfulness of sin," but on the exceeding rascality of lying and stealing—a religion that banishes small measures from counters, clay from paper, sand from sugar, chicory from coffee, alum from bread, and water from the milk cans. The religion that is to save the world will not put all the big strawberries on the top and all the little ones at the bottom. It will not make one-half a pair of shoes of good leather and the other half of poor leather. It will not let a piece of velvet that professes to measure twelve yards come to an untimely end in the tenth, or a spool of sewing silk that vouches for twenty yards be nipped in the bud at fourteen and a half; nor all-wool delaines and all-linen handkerchiefs be amalgamated with clandestine cotton. It does not put bricks at five dollars per thousand into chimneys it contracts to build of seven dollar material; nor smuggle white pine into floors that have paid for hard pine; nor leave yawning cracks in closets where boards ought to join; nor daub the ceilings that ought to be smoothly plastered nor make window-blinds with slats that cannot stand the wind, and paint that cannot stand the sun, and fastenings that may be looked at, but are on no account to be touched. The religion that is going to sanctify the world pays its debts. It does not consider that forty cents returned for one hundred cents given is according to the Gospel, though it may be according to law.

"Though the Promise Tarry, Wait."

A Christian father had been praying for years for the conversion of his children. All this time he had knelt with them at the family altar, had read the Bible with them daily. But still they manifested no special interest in the religion of the heart. Not one of them seemed to desire the salvation of his soul. He grew discouraged, faith wavered and almost failed.

Gathering his household around him one evening at the usual hour of prayer, he said to them: "Children, I have been praying for you all these years; I have tried to bring you up in the fear of the Lord, morning and evening I have read with you God's word, and knelt with you in prayer; but none of you as yet love him. I don't know that you even wish to be Christians. I think I shall now commend you to God in the family for the last time; and after to-night entreat God's blessings for you only in my closet, in the secret place of prayer."

Said the children with one accord; "Father, don't do this. Don't give up the family altar."

This was the beginning of better things. One and another and yet another sought and found Christ. The father lived to see them all daughters and sons, safe in Christ's fold, loving, earnest followers of him.

God in the Constitution.

The following well-timed remarks concerning this question appears in the New Castle Gazette:

"There is just as much reason in saying that God should be in the constitution of gas companies, railroad companies, literary societies, &c., as in the constitution of the United States. When God is in the hearts of the people, that is sufficient, there is nothing more required. When He is not in the hearts of the people, it is no matter whether He is in the constitution or not, and the foolish attempts under such circumstances to deceive Him by a political rather than a religious endorsement only betrays the ignorance of its authors. If God is everywhere, He is already in the constitution, and those who are engaged in efforts to legislate Him into a position which He has occupied for almost a century seem to have very crude notions of His peculiar attributes. If He is not everywhere, He is not God. That is all there is of it, ye Bible-banging politicians. By the way, it occurs to us as being just possible that God is quite as competent to locate in the right place as puritanic meddlers, calling themselves Christian Statesmen, are to locate Him or move Him about as heathens do their idols."

ELAINE
AS AN ILLUMINATOR.
WHY IT IS THE SAFEST.
ELAINE will not explode while burning in a lamp, nor in any other way, as it does not contain any of the explosive compounds so frequently met with in the ordinary oil for illuminating. A lamp, filled with ELAINE, if upset or accidently broken, will not explode or burn. There is no position in which you can put a lamp filled with ELAINE, for common use, in which it will explode. As no other illuminator has such advantages of safety, ELAINE IS CERTAINLY THE SAFEST FAMILY ILLUMINATING OIL KNOWN.

Barn and Five Horses Burnt.—On Friday night of last week an incendiary fired a large barn in Marion township, belonging to the heirs of the late David Lamb. Five valuable horses were consumed besides a large amount of lately harvested grain and hay. The loss is estimated at over ten thousand dollars. Insured in the Danville.

The Oldest Sunday School in Centre County.—The Presbyterian Sunday School of Bellefonte was organized not later than November, 1818. It was probably started earlier, but no record beyond the year 1818 is yet found, although diligent search has been made. There may be other Sunday Schools in the county organized at an earlier date. We shall be glad to receive any information on the subject. Which is the oldest Sunday School in Centre county? Is it the one named above or another?

The Strike at the Snow Shoe Mines.—We were informed on Saturday that the balance of the Snow Shoe coal miners had gone to work that (Saturday) morning. It appears that on the tenth of the month, the regular pay day, the company informed the miners that a reduction of ten cents per ton would be made from that date. Fifty cents is the regular price per ton throughout the mining regions of Centre and Clearfield counties, but the S. S. company had been paying ten cents advance during the Spring months. As soon as the miners were informed of the reduction, they held a meeting—forty-nine miners, about two-thirds of the whole number, were present. After some discussion, in which a few foolish leaders urged them to quit work, a vote was taken and twenty-five voted to strike and twenty-four opposed it. Thus about one-third of the workmen succeeded in closing up the mines. The Snow Shoe company had a great amount of coal on hand, both here and in Snow Shoe, and, although shipping about fifty tons per day, had plenty of reserve. After fifteen days of loafing the entire party went to work, and affairs are once more quiet in Snow Shoe.

——John C. Henry, the Bishop street tobacconist, who always keeps his eyes and ears about him, says that a few days ago a thief stopped at the house of Mr. Joseph Knoll, at the Mine Bank, and called for something to eat. After Mrs. Knoll had furnished this he asked where the men were, and was told they were at work in the field. He started off toward town but came back in another direction to the barn, and stole a set of good harness. Also, that on Tuesday last, a couple of scoundrels stopped at the house of Mr. Walkey, and finding no one in but Mrs. W., drew a revolver and threatened to shoot her if she didn't let them have what money she had. She said she had but two dollars; this they took and left.

Alexander Dougherty. — Mention was made in our columns recently of the mysterious disappearance of Alexander Dougherty, a farmer living near Martha Furnace, this county. Dougherty left home on the 19th of June with about three hundred dollars in his possession, which he took with him for the purpose of making a payment on property bought of John M. Root, of Antis township, Blair county. He was seen in Tyrone the same evening, a short time before the mail train west was due, but no further trace of him can be discovered. His family and friends are of course greatly distressed, and have been making every effort to find him, but thus far without avail. His wife and four children, the youngest only six months old, are yet on his farm near Martha Furnace. Dougherty was about five feet six inches in height, had sandy hair, smooth face, and was lame in his left foot from an injury sustained some years ago.

——At the depot on Monday morning, while the excursionists were preparing to embark for Saratoga, a good deal of interest was manifested by the crowd of lookers on, in the personal appearance of Major Wilson. His dove-colored pants extended to within about three inches of his arm pits and there wasn't any lap over to the vest worth mentioning. He evidently thought the less he had to do with vests the more linen he'd have for other purposes. But the largest part of his outfit consisted of a duster which contained twenty-three yards of linen, and would have made a roomy and comfortable shroud for the Cardiff Giant. By driving a few stakes at intervals through the tail, he could have improvised a very respectable Sibly tent with himself as the centre pole. Still he walked about with as much animation as a relic of 1776, and looked as solemn and dignified as if he was going to be cut open and lined with zinc.

——The Conferees of the Senatorial District, composed of the counties of Centre, Clearfield and Clinton met in Bellefonte on Tuesday, July 21, 1874. The following delegates were present: Centre, Wm. P. Wilson, A. O. Furst and James H. Rankin; Clearfield, E. C. Brenner; Clinton, John Stratton, J. B. G. Kinsloe.

On motion, W. P. Wilson was chosen chairman and J. B. G. Kinsloe, Sec'y. The object of the meeting was stated by the chair, when E. P. McCormick, Esq., of Lock Haven, was unanimously chosen Senatorial Delegate to represent the District in the State Republican Convention, which meets in Harrisburg, August 19th, 1874.

On motion adjourned

W. P. Wilson, Chairman.

J. B. G. Kinsloe, Sec'y.

Camp Meeting.—The Bellefonte and Bald Eagle Valley circuits of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ will hold their camp meeting one mile west of Port Matilda, commencing Thursday, Aug. 20, 1874. Christians of every denomination are cordially invited to come and worship the Lord with us. Tents will be rented for $3. Parties desiring tents will please inform the committee immediately. ——In Curtin twp., there are ten babies not two months old, and yet the harvest is not over.

——Travel is light on the B. E. V. Railroad at present, probably because nobody is allowed to ride Scott free.

——The Bellefonte Building & Loan Association sold their money at an average premium of 32 per cent. at the July meeting.

——There is an undertaker up town who steals a board from somebody's pig-pen every time he hears of a death in the vicinity.

——Mr. Geo. W. Hale, who is a law student in Columbia College, was more than delighted upon hearing that the Columbia boys had been victorious in the late inter-collegiate regatta.

——It is said that a human being has seven millions of pores through which perspiration and exhausted particles of the system escape. We are all pore creatures.

——A number of new side walks are being laid in different parts of town and it is a satisfaction to note that they are nearly all made of stone, fire brick or concrete. The old board walks are unsightly and dangerous.

——A bashful young divinity student recently made a terrible mix of it, on arising to preach for the first time. He embarrassingly announced his text in this wise: "And immediately the cook wept, and Peter went out and crew bitterly."

Said a wonderful orthodox preacher,
To a hen, 'you're a sweet, charming creature;'
Then the hen, all confiding,
And thus did the Hen-re-ward Beecher.

Then Theodore Tilton,
The great, modern Milton,
Called hen-ry an odious creature.
But Plymouth church cries,
"Old Theodore lies,
We'll bet you that Henry Ward beats yer."

——New fire-brick side walks are being laid in front of the Bush House and the residence of Judge Wagner. Other pavements, mostly stone and concrete are being laid on different streets, and when completed, with a few others that ought to be laid forthwith, we believe ours will be one of the best paved towns in the county.

——A field trial for the championship of cultivators, on rough ground, occurred near Pa. State College, July 18th, 1874, resulting in a grand triumph for W. P. Dale's Acme cultivator, P. P. Mast & Co's cultivator quitting the contest broken and disabled before it had completed its second round.

W. H. S.

——Hugh Riddle, is reported to be in the neighborhood. The Watchman says that he pursued two girls in the ridges beyond Milesburg, the other day, caught and tied one of them to a tree and then took after the other. Some gentlemen coming along, liberated the girl and put Hugh to flight. It's better when they send Hugh back to the penitentiary.

——Some unknown scoundrel broke into the store-room of the Bush-House the other night and stole one hundred and thirteen spring chickens (dressed), seven bushels of roasting-ears, seven dozen pies, (cherry and whortleberry, assorted) and sixty three pounds of honey. The unhung villain before leaving, pulled the spigots out of nine full barrels of mineral, iron and sulphur water.

——An example worthy of imitation has been set by a member of the Agricultural society, as the following card will witness:

Zion, July 23, 1874.

Sir:—The officers of the Agricultural Society desire to make the Fair of 1874 the best ever held in the County.

Knowing you to be successful in the production of Agricultural and Horticultural products, we earnestly invite you to contribute largely to the approaching Fair such articles belonging to the Second Department as you may deem meritorious—said Department embracing Field Crops, Flour and Meal, Vegetables and Fruits.

You may obtain a Premium List by calling on any of the officers of the Society.

T. B. Rupert,
Sup't of Second Department.

Bitten by a Copperhead.—We are informed by Mr. John J. Packer, of Curtin twp., that on the 13th inst., Job M. Lucas, at dusk, went out to a pile of shavings to get some kindling wood. While gathering up the shavings a copperhead snake struck him on the right hand, between the thumb and fore finger. He ran for his axe and took off the snake's head while it was in the act of jumping a second time. Mr. Lucas has suffered considerably, but is recovering. His hand swelled to enormous proportions within an hour after the bite.

Fire.—On last Thursday night the barn belonging to the estate of David Lamb in the western part of Marion township was discovered to be on fire. The barn contained about half the crop which had just been housed, six good horses and many farming untensils, all of which were consumed. The fire was the work of an incendiary. The barn was insured in the Danville Company, but there was no insurance on the contents, which falls very hard on the tenant, Wm. Lamb. There was a barn burnt on the same site about a year ago. Mr. Lamb was aroused by a noise which sounded like some person trying to get into the house; but when he went outside of the house he could hear nothing more and retired. When he discovered the fire, it had progressed so far that he was unable to get his horses out.

An Interesting Reunion.—Forty years ago, the old Milton Academy, under the principalship of Rev. David Kirkpatrick, was a flourishing institution, and numbered persons from all parts of the country among its students. In 1829 Governor Andrew G. Curtin and John Curtin, of this place, entered their names on its rolls, and in 1833 Captain W. W. Potter did likewise. Many of the names that appear upon the rolls of the Academy from 1822 to 1835, afterwards rose to eminence and usefulness, among them were Governors Pollock and Curtin, and other able and brilliant gentlemen. The Principal, Rev. David Kirkpatrick, or "old Kirk," as they called him in those days, has been dead for many years, but his memory is still fresh and green in the hearts of his pupils of nearly half a century ago. On Wednesday of last week, the 25th instant, a reunion of the alumni of the Old Academy was held, which was attended by about sixty scholars, including Governor and John Curtin and Captain W. W. Potter, of this place. Gov. Pollock was chosen President of the association of pupils, and the old Principal was represented by his son, Judge John Kirkpatrick, of Pittsburgh.

A great many interesting things were said and done on this most interesting occasion, and Dr. Samuel Pollock, of Williamsport, read a poem of his own composition, that is said to have been a very fine thing. Among the things most vividly remembered by the grey-headed scholars, was an "old strap" which "Old Kirk" used to use for the purpose of bringing out the latent talent of his pupils, and which, as his son said, had many a time been used upon the persons of "Jimmy Pollock," "Andy Curtin" and other now distinguished men. In the evening the "scholars" adjourned to the Academy of Music, where addresses were made before a large audience which had assembled to welcome the "scholars" of forty years ago. William C. Lawson, Esq., made the address of welcome, and was followed by Prof. Charles McCay, of Baltimore, Gov. Curtin, Judge Kirkpatrick, Dr. John R. Dickey, of Oxford, Gov. Pollock, and others. The exercises were closed with a benediction by Rev. Dr. S. S. Shedden, and the singing of the Doxology. The occasion seems to have been both a pleasant and a melancholy one. The full proceedings are to be printed in pamphlet form.

—Watchman.

——The dwelling house on the farm of Jeremiah Kline, in Brushvalley, about 5 miles east from this place, was entirely destroyed by fire on last Saturday morning, about 3 o'clock. Nothing of much account was saved, except a bureau and contents, an 8 day o'clock, sewing machine, large cherry dinning table and scarcely any of their clothing. The house was occupied by Mr. Levi Long, tenant on the farm, and as he had taken particular precautions against fire the evening before, he cannot account for it otherwise than that it originated from the chimney. Mr. Long had no insurance upon his personal property, and the loss is a severe one for him.—Reporter.

——The house of Mr. L. C. Palmer at Howard was entered by an unknown party one night last week and generally overhauled. Entrance was made through the cellar, thence to the millinery room of Mrs. Palmer where they ransacked show cases, desks and private papers in search of valuables Mr. Palmer received, a few days before, his insurance money, amounting to $962.00 and it is suspected that the thieves were after it. Fortunately this money and another smaller amount that had been in the store during the day, had been, placed in safety, and nothing was taken, the thieves apparently wanting greenbacks or nothing.

——It has been ascertained that Esqs. Potter, Spangler and Barnhart are not going to have a clear triangular contest for the office of District Attorney. W. J. Kealsh, Esq., has developed into a formidable adversary. His method of canvassing is not exactly new, but it is of a winsome nature. We have been noticing his mysterious appearances and disappearances for several months back, and have lately learned that all this time has been spent in setting up the pins for the free-rent office in the Court House cellar. His plan of campaign is to encamp in a township and remain in social intercourse around the beds and boards of the natives until all the men, women and children have been pledged to him. Then he pitches his tent in another district and repeats. This is a cheap, pleasant way of electioneering, and will no doubt bring its reward. We advise the other candidates to look out for the Great Mysterious.

Ice, Ice.—We have made arrangements to receive a full supply of ice from Lock Haven, and will be glad to supply families at their residences at one and a half cents per pound.

29-3t Shortlidge & Co.

—James Gates of Snow Shoe, a well known builder in this county, has just completed a large handsome barn in Curtin township for Mrs. Glosner.

Personal.—Mr. C. E. Anderson, book keeper of Bellefonte Iron Works, has gone to Williamsport to take charge of the books of Valentine & Co.

—The "Great Mysterious" is still perambulating the country roads.

—Rev. J. P. Hughes and family started for Cape May a day or two ago.

—Major Wilson went to some watering place or other on Monday for his annual bath.

—Ed. Perks, of Philipsburg, distributed salivated tobacco, in his shirt sleeves, on our streets on Friday.

—Seth H. Yocum, Esq., has purchased the old Judge Linn farm and is erecting thereon a handsome country residence.

—A. Hoy, Esq., has been chaperoning Chester Manson through Pennsvalley and a premium was paid for township delegates.

—We are requested to state that Rev. J. W. Leckey will preach in the M. E. church, in this place, next Sunday morning and evening.

—The health hunting sojourners at the Bush House are pleased with the healthful properties of the Sulphur, Iron and Mineral waters which are always on draught.

—Mr. C. D. Keller, formerly of this place, has left the caterership of the Merchants Hotel, Philadelphia, and engaged in the produce commission business. Success to him.

—Mr. George W. Young, of the Washington Star is holding forth at the Bush Horse. Excepting the fact that he is a brother in-law of Boss Shepherd, he is a genial and thorough gentleman.

—The democracy appear to be determined to nominate Col. S. T. Shugert for the Legislature. Well, if we must have a democrat, where can be found a more intelligent, honorable and able man than just Colonel Shugart.

—Quite a lively little tournament has lately been going on between Bierly of the Register and Joe Fury of the Watchman. They've been throwing dirt at each other with a vengence and the last issue of the Watchman puts Joe a shovelfull or two ahead.

—James T. Hale and S. Durbin Gray, Esquires, are both candidates for district attorney and according to the shadows of coming events either one of them will be that next official, that is if Potter is nominated and there's little doubt of that now.

—Prothonotary Williams gave a very handsome little supper to a few of his democratic friends on Wednesday evening and by some mistake or other we got into the party. The ice cream and other viands however tasted just as well and had no influence on our previously formed opinion that he is one of the best Prothonotaries the county has ever had.

—General John Fraser arrived in town on Friday and is the guest of Gen. Beaver. Since the General resigned the Presidency of our State College, he has been the president of Lawrence University, Kansas, the most noted and successful educational institution of the West. His numerous friends and admirers in this county were glad to welcome him back to his old home again.

Shocking Death.—Bellefonte is not the place to see much of brutality. Our people are mostly quiet and well-behaved; but on Saturday evening last, a tragedy was enacted that sent thrills of horror through many a heart. The facts as nearly as we can learn them, are these: About five o'clock on Friday evening, Thomas Cook, a domestic in a well known family, was strolling quietly down High street. At the barber shop, a huge, shaggy dog rushed from under a meat wagon across the street, and after some ugly growling and snapping of teeth seized Thomas by the throat.—A great crowd of people gathered in a few moments and all human effort was made to tear the dog loose. Other dogs gathered 'round, as if by some pre-arranged scheme, and the fiendish animals tore the poor domestic limb from limb. The police were soon on the ground, but not until the horrible death work had been done. The dogs were all mad, but made their escape. Thomas Cook, the victim, has no known relatives in the country. His remains were interred on the following day. He was a large yellow Thomas cat.

——We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of William C. Ross, of farm for sale, one mile north of Linden Hall, on Tuesday, Aug. 4, at 2 o'clock P. M. This is one of the most valuable farms in Centre county, and will no doubt be bought by some lucky person at a great bargain. The terms are one-half cash, balance to suit purchaser.

——The stable of Wm. Myers, in Half Moon twp., was destroyed by fire last Sunday morning between 10 and 11 o'clock. It is thought the fire originated by accident. No insurance. The loss it is thought will not exceed $150.

A Pitiful Sight.—The greatest excitement that has prevailed at Renovo for some time, says the Williamsport Bulletin, was witnessed there on Friday, in which a desperate character named Michael McGee, from Schuylkill county, was the principal actor. It appears, from the information gained in the affair, that he has been engaged for awhile working near Toledo. On Friday, while returning from that place to Schuylkill county, he was put off at Shintown with his wife and two small children, because he had not sufficient money to pay his fare. They arrived at Renovo about nine o'clock on Friday morning, having walked all the way from Shintown. He persuaded his wife to give him what money she had in her possession. This she at first refused to do, as he wished to expend it for liquor. She told him that she had only sixty-five cents, and this was needed to supply herself and the children with food. At this he became infuriated, and attacked her with considerable violence, injuring one of her wrists and greatly disfiguring her face. He drew a razor and would have undoubtedly succeeded in killing her, had she not pacified him, and, taking the razor away from him, put it into her bosom.

Notwithstanding the outrageous manner in which he had abused her, she was still gentle and begged him not to touch anything more. It was indeed a sad picture to those who witnessed it; the poor woman was completely crushed in spirit, her face bore traces of long years of suffering, while in her arms she held a tender infant, sleeping and innocent of the brutality of the father, who was lost to all sense of shame and then infuriated with rage from the effects of drink. The other child, a little girl, stood by the side of the mother, clinging fondly to her hand and sobbing as if her heart would break. The father regarded the scene with stoical indifference.

——The Premium List of the Agricultural Fair for 1874 has been issued, and we wish to call the attention of those receiving them to the firmness of the stitching on them, which was done on a Howe machine purchased of I. E. Palmer of this place. We have in our experience with sewing machines had occasion to use a great many different kinds, the Wheeler & Wilson, the Grover & Baker, the Weed, the Singer, the Domestic and many others, but the palm of superiority we accord to the "Light Running Howe." We advise our country friends who contemplate purchasing a machine to give Mr. Palmer a call and the Howe a trial, they never will regret it.

——A pair of seedy looking professional gamblers have been spending a week or more in town. They were dead broke and tried variously to raise the wind, but failed to do so as successfully as did their landlord and washerwoman.

MARRIED

On the 16th inst., by Rev. T. S. Bowman, at his residence in Lock Haven, Mr. A. T. Bing to Miss Belia Barlow, both of Port Matilda, Pa.

DIED

In Milesburg, on the 13th ult., Mrs. S. H. Moore, wife of Alpheus C. Moore, in the 29th year of her age. She was converted early in life and united with the M. E. Church, of which she was a worthy member. Though deprived the privilege of attending her services, through family cares and failing health, she never lost her interest in the church. Upon her death bed she gave indubitable evidence that the faith which had sustained her through all her afflictions was now sufficient to give her victory over death, and a glorious entrance into that inheritance "which is incorruptable, undefiled and fadeth not away." Only a short time before her death she conversed with friends and loved ones, giving evidence that all was well.

"Who would not wish to die like those
Whom God's own spirit deigns to bless,
To sink into that soft repose,
Then wake to perfect happiness."
